Kissinger, Pope discuss Middle East

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger held a long talk with Pope Paul VI at the Vatican yesterday on a range of international issues, the emphasis reportedly on the Middle East and President Nixon's summit talks in Moscow.

Pope said the U.S. Government should continue its work to world tensions despite "numerous and grave difficulties." Vatican spokesman Federico Alessandrini added.

Earlier yesterday, Kissinger asked crisis-battered Italy that it count on U.S. help in times of trouble. Informal sources said that the U.S. saw Italy as an essential factor of peace in the Mediterranean and would continue to give Italy all possible support.

However, U.S. officials said that Italy to Italy to tide the country over its current massive economic crisis was not discussed. There had been speculation that such a loan would be debated during Kissinger's visit, but an Italian spokesman confirmed that there had been no detailed discussion of financial problems.

J.S. officials quoted Kissinger as saying the President that when it was in trouble, the U.S. would help others to help ensure stability and progress. Kissinger met with Foreign Minister Moro.

Kissinger came to Rome on Friday from Paris, carrying on his ending of European leaders on his talks in Moscow. He is leaving the leaders that the U.S. has no commitment in Moscow to 35-nation summit meeting to end up the European Security Conference.

The Soviets have been promoting a summit as a highly public way of legitimizing their hegemony in Eastern Europe and the post-war II borders. The West remains and other Europeans have been reluctant to commit themselves.

Also, the Western nations want access to the East with books, artists, scholars and "ideas" freely.

After his audience with the Pope, Kissinger flew to Germany to attend the third-place game in the World Cup (see page 4).

Vatican positive on Rome-Israel tourist package

IN-GURION AIRPORT. — The tour is favourable to Israel's efforts to encourage Catholic pilgrims to visit Israel as well. Tourism Minister Moshe Kol reported last night on his return from Italy.

Mr. Kol, who visited Pope Paul VI Friday, said some 10 million Catholic pilgrims are expected to visit the Vatican during 1975 — Holy Year — and an arrangement has been made between El Al and Alitalia to charge pilgrims only 50 percent of the Rome-Israel one-way fare, for the round trip.

The Pope, Mr. Kol said, greeted with "Shalom" and expressed appreciation for the Tourism Ministry's policy of encouraging pilgrims. Mr. Kol also reported to Pope on tourism agreements discussed between himself and the Italian Tourism Minister. By previous agreement, Mr. Kol added, no political questions — such as the case of Jerusalem — were discussed.

'Substantial' territorial compromise but no return to 1967: Allon

By SHAYYA SHAPIRO
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said here on Friday that Israel was ready to make "substantial territorial compromises" to achieve peace, but could not return to the lines existing before the 1967 war. He said that a return to those borders "far from being conducive to peace, would be an invitation to disaster."

The Deputy Prime Minister spoke at the ZOIA House here, at a luncheon marking U.S. Independence Day, arranged jointly by the Israel-America League and the Industrial Club at the ZOIA House. Among those present was New York Republican Senator Jacob Javits.

Praising U.S. support for Israel, Mr. Allon welcomed American political aid in the quest for a peace treaty between Israel and its neighbors, but said Israel would be "flexibly stubborn" on the matter of boundaries.

Mr. Allon noted that there were sometimes differences of approach between the two countries, but Israel was bound to be realistic in light of its sometimes bitter experience. He gave as an example Israel's reluctance to accept the plan of former Secretary of State William Rogers to withdraw to the 1967 lines.

If Israel were to retrench behind undefensible borders, Mr. Allon said, the fact would only "whet Arab appetites." The belligerent tones coming from Cairo, Damascus and Beirut hardly help to inspire confidence, he said.

As for detente, Mr. Allon said, the test of its workability would be the Soviet attitude on Jews wishing to emigrate to Israel. He praised American efforts on behalf of Russian Jews and the Jews in Syria, which, he said, were "prompted by purely humanitarian considerations."

Senator Javits stressed the necessity for both the U.S. and Israel "to exert every effort to make their policies understandable to each other" so as "not to allow divisiveness and pulling apart." He urged Israel to keep Americans informed first through the administration, but also through Congress and public opinion, "which is more vital than ever to U.S.-Israel friendship."

Neither side should take the other's viewpoint as granted, he said. "It is inevitable that the U.S. perspective be different from Israel's on some issues of vital concern — even as we share the basic objectives of just peace and security for Israel," the Senator said.

America's interest in the Atlantic alliance could engender an area of "difference of perspective" between the U.S. and Israel. It was therefore "essential," Sen. Javits said, that the Western nations, particularly the nine European countries in the E.E.C., be "associated with and committed to the peacemaking process in the Middle East."

Sen. Javits also noted that Israel should consider the "vestiges in the U.S." caused by Israel's retaliatory raids. However, in this respect, he said, the U.S. and Western Europe must ask whether they were doing all they could to deal with the terror, which was also dangerous to them. The answer must be "no," he concluded.

Top-level resignations

ATHENS (AP). — Greece's Foreign Minister and two high ranking diplomats have resigned in the wake of the country's deteriorating relations with the Turkish and Cyprus governments, authoritative sources said Friday.

The sources said the two diplomats became disgruntled when the Cyprus Government provided evidence that Greek military leaders controlled the "Eoka B" terrorists in Cyprus, who have called for the overthrow of President Makarios and union with Greece by force.

There has been no official announcement on the resignation of Foreign Minister Spyridon Tetenas, General Secretary of the Ministry Angelos Pachos, and Director General Ioannis Tzoumis, head of the department handling Turkish and Cypriot affairs.

Histadrut meets today on c-o-l deadlock

Jerusalem Post Staff

As the deadlock continued over the cost-of-living payment issue, the Histadrut executive was to meet this morning to discuss the Government's request to withhold, for nine months, half the increase in the c-o-l hike due to be paid from this month.

The Government proposal was to be taken up earlier this morning by Labour-Alignment members of the Histadrut executive. At a meeting late Thursday night Histadrut Secretary-General Yehoshua Rabinowitz and Mr. Meshel had been meeting for four hours with no result, when Mr. Yadin suggested that the c-o-l freeze apply only to those earning $11,000 per month or more. The frozen sums would be returned after the nine-month freeze in bi-monthly installments.

Mr. Meshel insisted on payment of the full c-o-l. The Histadrut Secretary-General told The Post he saw no reason the party should intervene. "The outline of wage policy is the prerogative of the Histadrut, and is worked out in the Histadrut Alignment faction," he said. Ministers Rabinowitz and Yadin were invited to the faction's meeting this morning, but the faction was not bound to accept their stand, he added.

The Histadrut chief received support on Friday from the Labour Party's Young Guard, and from the Government employees' section of the clerical union.

Mr. Meshel said in an Israel Radio interview yesterday that the issue was "not a subject for discussion." Failure to pay the full sum would mean social unrest, insufficient productivity and "regimes like this fall."

The State must find ways, he added, to overcome its problems by taxing luxuries and levying more from those who do not pay as much taxes as they should. On July 15, the precise c-o-l rise will be announced by the Central Bureau of Statistics and the Histadrut will base its demands on this figure.

The Government-Histadrut deadlock is complicated by the fact that only a week ago the Labour Party Leadership Bureau resolved to revive the party's Economic Committee. The Committee is headed by Aharon Barak, former Secretary-General of the Histadrut and a member of its executive committee.

Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz defended the Government's measures on Israel Television Friday night. He said in an interview the steps were necessary in order to avoid the need to present a supplementary budget of E.20.

Special Cabinet session

Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent

The Cabinet met in special session in Tel Aviv on Friday to discuss security affairs in its role as the Ministerial Committee on Security. The deliberations of this committee are secret by law, and Cabinet Secretary Gershon Avner would give no details.

Informed sources said that the Horev Committee report on Ma'alot due to be published this week, was not discussed during Friday's Cabinet meeting, nor was it on the agenda for today's regular Sunday session. (The Cabinet has already discussed the report at length.)

The Prime Minister, Mr. Yitzhak Rabin, is scheduled to report to the Cabinet today on his meetings with

Scare over Ford sniper proves false

DALLAS (AP). — A shattered window in a patrol car sparked a police report yesterday that a sniper had fired on a motorcade carrying U.S. Vice-President Gerald R. Ford into Dallas. But within minutes officials said that no shot had been fired.

The Vice-President apparently was not even aware of the incident and continued on his way to a downtown dedication in the wake of President John F. Kennedy's assassination in 1963.

State police, the secret service and aides to Ford all said no evidence could be found that a bullet caused the shattered hole in the window of a patrol car bringing up the rear of the motorcade.

Some officials blamed heat expansion for the broken window, which, according to a Ford aide, shattered with a "sharp sound."

"A complete examination of the area and of the vehicle resulted in this conclusion: It was heat expansion. There was no bullet," said William A. Hawthorne, secret service spokesman in Washington.

The Texas department of public safety, which was the source of the original sniper report, said only "We have been unable to find a bullet in the car. We cannot definitely determine that it was a bullet. One can only speculate that there had been a shot."

Bill Roberts, Ford's press aide, said secret service agents and police sped to an area where shots could possibly have been fired from, but found no signs of spent ammunition.

The car was carrying one secret service agent, one Dallas police officer and one state police officer.

None of the car's occupants was reported injured, and at no point in the flurry of reports was the Vice-President said to be harmed.

Ford was in Dallas to dedicate the World Trade Centre, a $20m. structure that is one of a complex of buildings in an industrial park. Upon his arrival there, he held a news conference, making no mention of the incident.

Nixon may visit Japan

KEY BISCAYNE, Florida (Reuters). — President Nixon plans to make a state visit to Japan soon, the Florida White House said yesterday. Presidential aides said Mr. Nixon, resting here after his arduous trips to the Middle East and the Soviet Union, also hoped to visit Western Europe this year and to make a separate state visit to France.

Terrorists are asking Syria for missiles

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

The Palestinian terror groups in Lebanon will seek ground-to-air missiles from Syria regardless of objections by the Beirut Government.

Zuhair Mohsen, member of the Palestinian Liberation Organisation (PLO) and head of the Syrian-backed Salika terrorist group, was quoted in Beirut newspaper Friday as saying the terrorists intend to build up their arsenals despite government objections. "The Palestinians," he said, "will seek advanced weapons — ground-to-air missiles — from Syria to protect the refugee camps against Israeli attacks." Mohsen said that the Arab Defence Council conference in Cairo last week was a failure "because the party for whose sake the meeting was called did not want assistance."

Beirut newspapers said Lebanon had vetoed a terrorist proposal that the Arab countries jointly supply Lebanon's 15 refugee camps with $20m. worth of ground-to-air missiles. "Al-Moharrer," a pro-terrorist newspaper, said Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Nuxtah asked violently on the subject with Mohsen at the Cairo meeting last week.

"Al-Anwar" said the Lebanese delegation had demanded at the Defence Council meetings that a moratorium be called on "all terrorist operations against Israel, pending the outcome of Israeli-Arab peace talks in Geneva." The terrorist delegation rejected the Lebanese demand, saying they would suspend operations only from Lebanon territory, the paper said.

Lebanon has been reluctant to allow heavy arms into the refugee camps since a 1969 agreement gave the terrorists sovereignty over the camps. The Lebanese delegation to the Cairo meeting insisted that the defence of Lebanese territory was the duty of the Lebanese army and not that of the terrorists.

The key to the situation appears to be in the hands of Syria whose president, Hafez Assad, may or may not give the terrorists the weapons they want regardless of the official Lebanese stand.

Several members of the Knesset committee, from coalition and opposition ranks alike, said that if former Prime Minister Golda Meir had not committed herself publicly to publish the Horev Report, it would have been far better kept classified, because of the defects it uncovered, and because it handled the sort of grave entanglement with terrorists which could re-occur at any time.

The Horev Report apparently made it clear that communication between Dayan and Gur at Ma'alot, and the Cabinet in Jerusalem, was inadequate. Nor was all the information available at Ma'alot transmitted to the Government, sitting in all-day session.

Members of the Knesset committee on Thursday offered varying suggestions about the sections of the report which they felt should be suppressed. Premier Rabin and Justice Minister Ezer Weizman attended the committee session.

The Knesset Committee did not at any time discuss any proposal to invite Moshe Dayan. The Post was told by three committee men from three different parties.

When one prominent Likud personality who has been publicly critical of security policies in the last few months said he wanted to invite Mrs. Meir, Mr. Dayan and Chief of Staff Gur to the Knesset committee, he won no support, even from more senior Likud committee.

But some press reports made capital out of Dayan's offer, in a private conversation, to come to the committee and elucidate any unclear points, should he be invited.

Construction to halt on 5,000 luxury flats

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The new building control orders promulgated by the Housing Ministry as part of the new economic policy, are expected to stop construction of some 5,000 luxury flats whose area exceeds 110 square metres each. Manpower released from the work at these luxury building sites should be transferred to speed up construction of flats for new immigrants, young couples and slum-clearing projects, which are over six months behind construction schedule.

This was stated on Friday by Housing Minister Avraham Ofer at a meeting with representatives of the Local Authorities Centre. He assured them that the new building control orders would not affect construction of school and kindergarten buildings. A representative of the Local Authorities would be co-opted to the Housing Ministry's committee of experts that will hear appeals against stoppage of various public buildings. Offer promised, apologizing at the same time for not having consulted them before the building control order was gazetted.

Mr. Ofer explained that calculation of the 110 square metre limit for flats would be based on the actual area of the flat, including balconies, 20 cm thick outside walls, and the flat's proportional share of the building's staircase and elevator space. The entrance area of the building, as well as service rooms, such as for heating, gas and garbage, and shelters, would not be taken into account, he stressed.

Under the new control orders, construction of buildings which are not to be used for defence purposes, industry or agriculture and are still at the foundation, below ground-level stage, may only be continued up to ground-level. This applies also to public buildings being put up by the Housing Ministry. A special committee is to see to it that construction will be stopped so as not to cause damage to the building site. In a radio interview yesterday, David Stern, chairman of the Building Contractors Association, expressed doubt that labour mobility would be gained by veteran building workers moving from the centre of the country to outlying areas. Many of them were likely to quit the building trade instead, he warned, recalling that during the recession in the mid-60s some 15,000 building workers changed their profession and never returned to the trade.

Labour 'Ideological Circle' wants near total withdrawal

By SARAH HONIG

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The ultra-dovish Labour Party "Ideological Circle" yesterday aired a "peace programme" proposing almost total Israeli withdrawal from the areas held since the Six Day War in return for Arab recognition of Israel and acceptance of minor border adjustments.

The programme was submitted to the Circle by committee members during a meeting held in Beit Berl at Tsofat yesterday.

The principal Circle members are mostly university professors from the Labour Party and Mapam.

The central point in the "programme" involves Israeli recognition "in principle of Arab sovereignty over the administered territories" and eventual Israeli withdrawal from practically all of them. The Arabs, including the Palestinians, are called upon to recognize Israeli sovereignty.

The "programme" further states that both Israelis and Palestinians have legitimate rights in the Land of Israel and that territorial partition is the only possible solution.

Some of the speakers during the debate brought up the problem of Jerusalem and called for Israeli concessions there as well. They argued that Israel should not speak of a united Jerusalem without considering the problem of Arab sovereignty there as well.

Other speakers sharply attacked Israeli settlements in the areas including the Golan Heights. The settlements on the Golan, they argued, could sabotage any chance for compromise.

Not all the participants in the Beit Berl conference agreed in full to the general tone of the debate. Tel Aviv University's Prof. Shmuel Gutman warned that the wording of the Circle's resolutions should be altered so as not to accept a return to the June 1967 borders.

Ephraim Bilu of Tel Aviv reminded the participants that Palestinian pronouncements are anti-Israel in the extreme, and it would be expedient not to ignore this fact.

These points, however, were not heeded by most of the speakers. One of the Circle leaders, Mr. Zvi Kesse, said the Circle finds itself at odds with the government on issues of foreign relations and defence. He said that his group had initially backed the candidacy of Yitzhak Rabin for Prime Minister, but it was now taken back by some of his most recent pronouncements, which, according to Mr. Kesse, closed off options for a dialogue with the Palestinians.

Another Circle leader, Prof. Yohanan Peres, a sociologist, explained that in contrast to the government's preoccupation with day to day matters, the objective of the Circle is long-range planning.

The "programme" also includes a caustic attack on Israeli policy prior to the Yom Kippur War, which it claimed, relegated diplomatic considerations to "a lower position than military considerations, resulting in an impasse."

25 Jewish scientists face trial

VIENNA (AP). — Some 25 Jewish intellectuals face long prison terms following their arrests in Moscow for trying to hold a scientific seminar during the visit of President Nixon, two concerned friends reported Friday.

"We appeal to the world public to prevent their trial," said Vladimir Galaytsky, 46, a painter, and Mark Novodvorsky, 21, a doctor of mathematics. Novodvorsky had been involved in preparing the seminar. "It was to be a scientific seminar, without any political ties. The secret police banned it and told us we would be arrested if we insisted on holding it."

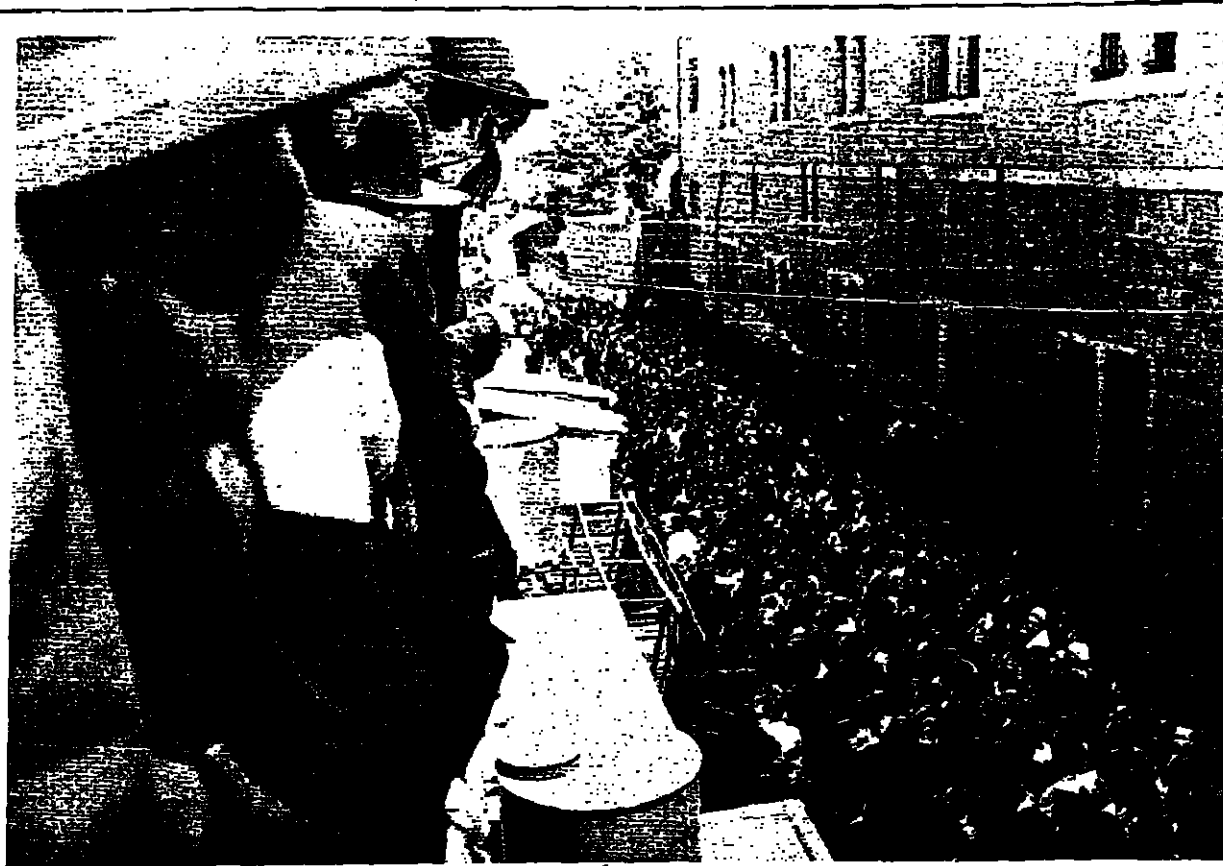

Police surrounded the apartment of physicist Alexander Voronov where the meeting was to have opened on July 1 and several persons were seen being arrested as they arrived there. Novodvorsky said all participants, whom he believed to number around 25, were arrested.

The mathematician said he escaped arrest because he was summoned to the Moscow visa office to get his exit permit on the same day that the conference opened.

The two were interviewed in a small Vienna hotel where they are staying until Wednesday when they leave for Rome. Novodvorsky hopes eventually to get an American visa to go to Princeton University, and Galaytsky wants to go to Sweden.

The two gave these names of some of the intellectuals under arrest: Alexander Voronov, Professor of Physics at whose apartment the seminar was to be held, Mark Abel, Viktor Brailovsky, both also Professors of Physics, Grigory Rosenstein, Doctor of Bio-physics, Alexander Lantz, Professor of Mathematics, Dmitry Ram, an electronics scientist, Vitaly Rubin, an expert on ancient China, and Mikhail Agursky, a cybernetics specialist.

On Friday Soviet authorities released Jewish activist Vladimir Slepkov, one of about 50 Soviet activists put into preventive detention just before President Nixon's recent Moscow Summit trip.

Mourners listen to eulogies for the late Rabbi Amram Blau, outside his home at Mea Shearim's "Hungarian Houses."

NATOREI KARTA LEADER DIES Thousands at Blau funeral

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Rabbi Amram Blau, head of the anti-Zionist Natorei Karta sect, died unexpectedly in Jerusalem Friday morning. Members of his family said he was 74 but according to associates he was close to 80.

Rabbi Blau had entered Shaare Zedek Hospital in the middle of the week for what was described as minor surgery for a kidney ailment. His wife, Ruth, had left for a trip to Australia a few days before and was out of the country when he died.

A crowd estimated by police at 5,000 gathered at noon Friday in the courtyard of Rabbi Blau's home in the Batel Ungarn (Hungarian Houses) to which the body had been brought. After eulogies made brief by the approaching Sabbath, the funeral procession set out for the Har Menuchot cemetery five kilometres away. Out of respect for Rabbi Blau, the mourners proceeded by foot. Rabbi Blau's body, wrapped in a tallit (prayer shawl), was carried on a pall by a succession of mourners. At every yeshiva and synagogue along the way, the pall bearers halted and kaddish was said. The one exception was the Gerrer Yeshiva, whose leaders Rabbi Blau had long feuded over their outspoken support for the Zionist state.

The Natorei Karta leaders permitted only "persons who had never participated in (Israeli) elections" to pass before the bier, a slap aimed especially at other ultra-Orthodox Jews such as Agudat Yisrael Party members who are active in the state. However, many of those attended the funeral, including Agudat Yisrael leader Menachem Porush.

A ranking police officer, who had often led police details in violent clashes with demonstrating Natorei Karta members, reportedly approached the pall during the procession and asked for forgiveness.

According to one of Rabbi Blau's associates, Natorei Karta members had sought "permission" from Arab notables in East Jerusalem to bury Rabbi Blau on the Mount of Olives. Most members of the sect have not set foot in East Jerusalem since the city was reunited in the Six Day War, since they regard it as territory conquered by the Zionists. The associate said the notables had voiced no objection, but that the plan was dropped when the hebra kaddish (burial society) said there was no room in the Mount of Olives cemetery next to Rabbi Blau's father. Finally, Rabbi Blau was buried next to his first wife and his mother in Har Menuchot.

The Natorei Karta last night named Rabbi Uri Blau, 48-year-old son of the deceased, as the new head of the sect. He is one of four sons and six daughters left by Rabbi Blau.

Born in the Jewish Quarter of the Old City, he was one of the founders of Natorei Karta (Arabic for "Guardians of the City") which was dedicated to fighting Zionist control over the Holy Land. Rabbi Blau and his followers believed that the Jewish state could be revived only with the coming of the Messiah. The rabbi did not handle Israeli money (he used dollar bills) or use an Israeli passport (he would use a laissez passers).

The Mea Shearim Quarter, founded 100 years ago, was the stronghold of the Natorei Karta and the focus of many of their demonstrations against the state and the Orthodox who supported it. "Reb Amram," however, frequently led his supporters out into the secular neighbourhoods to demonstrate against what they regarded as transgressions against the holiness of the city. These included mixed public swimming pools (for men and women), buses travelling before the end of the Sabbath, and the Eros sex shop (a demonstration in which Rabbi Blau and his followers donned sack cloth).

His marriage, following the death of his first wife, to a former French dancer who had converted to Judaism, caused a deep split among Rabbi Blau's supporters. The marriage to the former Madeleine Fieret took place in 1955 and it was only recently that the rift was healed.

Despite his unbending antagonism to the state and his militant stance on religious issues, he was personally a gentle and amiable man and was regarded affectionately by more than one police official who had clashed with him over the years.

'WHO'S A JEW' ISSUE
NRP circles 'optimistic' over finding formula

By SEAYIA SHAPIRO

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

TEL AVIV. — Optimism prevailed in National Religious Party circles over the weekend, though no one could put the finger on what it was based. "Apparently, the Rabbinate is willing to accept how the formula which it rejected a year ago," Eli Berman, Secretary-General of the NRP, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

The return of Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren on Wednesday is expected to shed some light over the "Who's a Jew" issue, which has proved the main stumbling block in the NRP's joining the Government Coalition.

(Rabbi Goren was reported by an Israeli Radio correspondent in New York yesterday as being "more optimistic than ever before.")

An important change of atmosphere was also detected in Mapam circles. Haim Shur, an "Al Hamishmar" editor, on Friday took issue in an article with former Minister Mordechai Bentov, arguing that it was politically necessary to bring the NRP into the coalition. The alternative, Mr. Shur wrote, would be to drive the Religious Party into the Likud camp, which would thus become dangerously united in the next elections.

Meanwhile, political observers here deny the reports that Likud is falling apart. The Likud's decision to abstain in the Knesset on the Government's new economic measures was undoubtedly a blow to Herut leader Menachem Begin, whose advice to vote against was overruled by the majority led by the Liberals. Mr. Begin accepted his defeat calmly, turning his seat to matters on which he is an ardent groundswoman in his article in "Ma'ariv" warning against concessions to the Arabs.

The idea that the Likud could be split, and that the Liberal Party and the State List could be combined in a central liberal bloc, has been cherished by the Independent Liberals for some time. But for the time being, at least, it still looks like wishful thinking.

'Summer time' won't save much fuel: Electric Co.

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The introduction of Summer Time may cost the Israel Electric Corporation some IL3m, the company's commercial manager, Ya'acov Traub, said on Friday.

Mr. Traub estimated that during the three months of Summer Time the corporation would save up to 13,000 tons of fuel, but he said this figure represents less than one-half of one per cent of the corporation's annual consumption. Financially this would be a IL3m. savings, but on the other hand, the corporation would lose an estimated IL5m. net in income, he said.

Government calculations had indicated the corporation would have a five per cent saving on its fuel bill.

The company has estimated that during the three months of Summer Time, electricity consumption would drop by 16 million kilowatt hours, almost exclusively from reduced commercial and private use of lighting. Although this amounted to only 0.2 per cent of the total power the corporation sold, this power was the most profitable it sold, Mr. Traub said.

Tel Aviv's Chief Rabbi, Rabbi Yehuda Frankel, has come out strongly against the switch to daylight saving time, objecting "both as a rabbi and as an ordinary citizen."

His rabbinical objections begin with a dispute caused to Sabbath observers. He noted that buses start running a bit earlier than sunset. "In a week," he said, "the late afternoon hours will still be fully sunlit and this will mean that buses will be running during the Sabbath proper, a fact which, outside of its constituting a desecration of the Sabbath, might instigate clashes between various segments of the population."

His "ordinary citizen's" objections relate mainly to "the punishment of ordinary people by adding another hot daylight hour during the already hot summer and forcing them to change habits unnecessarily. How are you going to put children to bed when it's still light outside? And besides, when will the fuel savings be?" he asked.

Flight schedules at Ben-Gurion Airport will remain unchanged for the rest of this month, despite daylight saving time, officials told "Yim" yesterday.

But the schedules may be changed in August since it is feared that travellers from Israel might have difficulty making plane connections in Europe (Israel is now three hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time, instead of two).

GHQ considering Sharon for reserve post

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

The General Staff is considering changes in the assignments of posts to senior reserve officers, among them Aluf Ariel Sharon M.K. Sharon was relieved of his reserve command of a division in the wake of controversy that grew out of his criticism of the conduct of the October war in a series of interviews with foreign newspapers.

The way was cleared for reassigning Sharon when Aluf Shmuel Gonen last week dropped his charges against Sharon. Gonen, who was OC Southern Command during the Yom Kippur War, had alleged that Sharon disobeyed his orders during the war.

Gonen is now on study leave, after being suspended from his post as OC Southern Sinai following the interim report of the Agranat Commission of inquiry into the war. But it is learned that the Army is considering what post he will be offered when the inquiry is completed.

T/A Yitzhak Zaid new OC Haha

Aluf Mishne Yitzhak Zaid was on Friday appointed OC Haha, the Defence Forces civil defence corps, and promoted to the rank of Takt. Aluf. He replaces Takt-Aluf Uri Rom, who retired from active service at his own request, the Army Spokesman announced.

Aluf Mishne Eitan Shimshoni, who was serving as acting head of Haha, will be appointed to another senior post.

T/A Zaid, 46, was born in Haifa. He joined the Palmah in 1946 and fought in the War of Independence. Up to and during the Six Day War he served as commander of infantry units and held various training posts, rising to the position of deputy brigade commander. After the 1967 war he was sent on an IDF mission to Singapore and on his return was appointed OC Haifa District.

Three drown on beaches

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Three persons drowned off the country's beaches yesterday, one of them in the Dead Sea.

Hadri Mahmoud Hamin, 22, of the Jericho refugee camp, drowned while swimming in the Dead Sea yesterday, near Ein Gedi. His body was removed from the water and rushed to hospital in Jericho, where doctors pronounced him dead. No details were available on how he drowned.

A 45-year-old woman, Lutfia Sason, of Petah Tikva, got into difficulty while swimming at the Neturim Beach, near Kfar Yitzhak. She was pulled out of the water and taken to the Eilat Yotat Hospital in Haifa, where she died soon after being admitted. There was no life-guard present at the spot where she was bathing with her husband, Rav-Samir Avraham Sason, of the Petah Tikva Police.

A man, whose name has not been released for publication, drowned while swimming at the Adit Beach, near Haifa yesterday. No further details about the incident were available last night.

THREE GANGS OF THIEVES were rounded up by Tel Aviv Police last week. One gang, of youths aged 15 to 20, specialized in stealing cars; the second gang concentrated on stealing spares and tyres from a Holon garage; the third had a specialty theft of alms from the Holon Cemetery.

Five million people in 10 years — Sapir population of five million Jews in his country within the next 10 years is not a dream but a reality, Pinhas Sapir, Chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive, in a television interview on Sunday night. He said this would be about through immigration and naturalization.

Finance Minister expressed belief that under his guidance Jewish Agency could bring in 100,000 immigrants within the next years.

He has undertaken this task with fervor and a desire to achieve, it is possible that I may, in a couple of years, arrive at conclusion that Jews simply do want to come at this stage," he added.

Actually most Jews never wanted come on aliyah. Only those with on and faith did so. Even when knife was pointed at their necks, they still believed the dream would pass," he said.

Admitting that immigration had been by some 30 per cent since Mr. Sapir listed the reasons as family problems, housing and, of course, the desire to live in the State of Israel.

He said the attitude of the public towards aliyah as "bad," claiming "artificial antagonism had been created between the immigrant and the young couples or the shul dwellers." The truth was, he said, that immigration brought economic development and the possibility of absorbing more olim.

He said the division of responsibility for immigrant absorption was an "unfortunate affair." But there was no point in wasting energy by trying to change this now. The important thing was to try to work under the existing framework and help the olim, he added.

Asked which areas would be given priority in settlement, Mr. Sapir reminded interviewers that as far back in 1955, he had come out against settlement in the occupied areas. "I said, 'Let's not put up settlements in places that afterwards would prove to be serious liabilities'" in negotiations with the Arab states.

He urged settlement of the Arava first, "where geographical conditions are not worse than in the Jordan Rift" — which has problems of water and where profitable agriculture is questionable.

Mr. Sapir said in reply to another question that he had no intention "at this stage" of giving up his seat in the Knesset.

P.M.'s ARAB AFFAIRS ADVISER:

Rejection by Jews pushes Arabs to nationalism

The spread of nationalism in the villages of Israel is of more concern to the Government than the actively fed Israeli Arabs who have used the terrorists.

Shmuel Toledoano, the Prime Minister's Arab Affairs Adviser, expressed this concern yesterday on Israel Radio interview.

Mr. Toledoano said it was unavoidable that some Israeli Arabs would develop their way into terrorist ranks as there is war between Israel and her Arab neighbours. But while the Six Day War only some 10,000 have been tried for security offences, and about 70 have crossed the border into other Arab countries, the problem was likely to grow, unless the Arab minority is accepted by the Jewish majority as an integral part of the State.

The problem, said Mr. Toledoano, is not whether or not an Arab village has been linked to the electricity grid. Within three years there will be some 20,000 educated young Arabs who will seek to find their place both professionally and socially — and at the present rate and form of absorption, they will have difficulties in doing so. It was true, Mr. Toledoano added, that Israel has had difficulties in absorption of immigrants, but this did not lessen the importance of absorbing the Arab minority.

He noted that top officials were lending a sympathetic ear to this problem. However, among the general public there were many who seem to identify the desire to solve it with a "love for Arabs" — a difficult thing for them to accept in these tense times.

J'lem police dismantle bomb in Jaffa Road

A small, improvised explosive charge was discovered at the entrance to a yard in Jerusalem's Jaffa Road on Friday morning, and is dismantled by police sappers before it went off.

The charge, made of a piece of pipe filled with match-heads and bits of metal, and connected to a torch battery and a wrist-watch, as discovered at about 6.30 by workers from one of the neighbouring shops. He immediately alerted a police who evacuated the area while they dismantled the "bomb."

"Tim" notes that a similar charge was discovered the week before last outside the Arzi Garage in Jerusalem's Atarot industrial zone. Police investigators refused to speculate about any link between the two incidents. (Ithm)

Porn publisher Roth dies at 79

NEW YORK (AP). — Publisher Samuel Roth, defendant in a landmark U.S. Supreme Court pornography ruling, died of heart failure Wednesday at the age of 79.

Roth, an Austrian native who moved here in 1938, was convicted in 1966 and spent five years in prison for violating federal anti-obscenity statutes by publishing "Venus and Tannhäuser."

Roth was previously imprisoned for publishing pirated selections from James Joyce's "Ulysses" and for disseminating D.H. Lawrence's "Lady Chatterley's Lover." In 1957 the Supreme Court upheld his conviction, rejecting his contention that the anti-obscenity statute violated First Amendment rights to freedom of speech and the press.

Coffee and sympathy after getting police runaround

By MACABEE DEAN, Jerusalem Post Reporter

BEERSHEBA. — A police investigation into a police investigation has drawn a total blank. However, the police officer now handling the case has invited the complainants to his home for coffee and cakes.

The case dates back to November, 1973, when Professor Shaul Kreps was involved in a traffic accident. Professor Kreps, former dean of the Graduate School of Newark College of Engineering, is presently employed as a research engineer at a local plant. He is also a guest lecturer in Chemistry at Ben-Gurion University.

After the accident Dr. Kreps was taken to the Beersheba Hospital to check for injuries: there were none, although he was badly shaken up. His car, a brand new Peugeot, was towed by the Beersheba police to the Beersheba police garage. Here, it was examined on December 19 by an insurance company expert who said that parts (the battery, the windshield wiper mechanism, other small parts) valued at more than 11,000 had been removed. Several independent witnesses said that nothing had been removed from the car before it was taken into police custody.

In February, 1974, the car was taken by the Peugeot garage for repairs, and a bill was presented for these parts (as well as for the repairs due to the accident).

At the end of February, Mrs. Kreps lodged a formal complaint with the police, asking for an investigation into the theft which could have taken place, as far as is known, in the police garage.

Several days later, when she called to ask what progress had been made, she was informed that the "file" dealing with the case had been misplaced.

Would she call back again? During the next three weeks she went to the police station half a dozen times, was sent from official to official, and was informed that it might take time to find the police file and continue the investigation.

She thereupon threatened to "inform the press and complain to the State Comptroller, charging that the police were not anxious to complete an investigation which seemed to implicate the police."

She was assured that another investigation would be launched, both into the theft itself, as well as into the "case of the missing police file."

After several weeks, during which the police were in theory investigating the police, and nothing happened, another complaint was sent to Tel-Nitzav Ze'ev Margalit, of National Police Headquarters, who was recently appointed "Public Complaints Commissioner."

A new police investigation was ordered, this time into why the second police investigation had failed to produce any results — let alone the stolen parts.

The final outcome was that the latest official investigating the entire case reported that "the tracks were cold now" and it was difficult to find the culprits. But one thing was certain, the latest investigating official said, "the police should never be suspected of being involved in any form or manner with the theft."

He invited Dr. and Mrs. Kreps to see him at his office at 4.30 one afternoon. He failed to show up for the appointment. He made two other appointments, both in the morning, but they refused to come, saying "we are both working people."

Thereupon he invited them to come to his home in the late afternoon for "coffee and cakes."

Contractors' appeal rejected on illegal house

TEL AVIV. — Three Rehovot contractors, sentenced to jail terms by the Rehovot Magistrate's Court, had their appeals denied in District Court here last week. But they were permitted to remain out of prison pending an appeal to the Supreme Court.

The three brothers — Jamil Atzulan, Shlomo Ariel and Uri Ariel — were convicted of building an apartment house of five storeys on a piece of land they owned at 9 Rehovot Gushkin, Rehovot, without a permit and in contravention of court injunctions. Jamil was sentenced to nine months in prison, Shlomo to six, and Uri received a suspended sentence. Each was fined the maximum fine of 12,000.

According to the master plan for the area, only a single structure was allowed on the plot, and a one-storey house was already standing there. But the brothers applied to the local planning committee, on which brother Jamil serves, and asked it to approve construction of a four-storey building. The committee approved the request, even though it was bound not to do so — and the District Town Planning Committee later rejected it. But the brothers, meanwhile, went on to build a five-storey building, added rooms to the existing building, and began construction of a third building — even though a court injunction banning this had been issued.

The District Court instructed the lower court to hear applications from the buyers of apartments the contractors had built illegally, and stayed the execution of demolition orders issued by the magistrates against the illegal construction. The three-judge District Court panel recommended that the lower court find a way to compensate the purchasers while carrying out the demolition of the portions of the building illegally built. Phillip Berrigan in White House protest

WASHINGTON (AP). — Anti-war activist Phillip Berrigan was arrested on Friday on the street outside the White House as he sat shackled in a simulated "tiger cage" prison cell.

The tiger cage, a metre by metre by two-metre structure used in South Vietnam, was mounted on a truck and was on display outside the executive mansion.

Two others were arrested with Berrigan. All three were charged with parading without a permit and with releasing a dog.

Berrigan said later the arrest was probably illegal, but a spokesman for the U.S. Park Police said a permit for the display was required.

How Americans foiled plot to assassinate Mufti in '46

HAIFA. — A plan to assassinate Haj Amin el Husseini in Austria in 1946 was foiled at the last minute by U.S. occupation forces — Tuvia Friedman, chairman of the Documentation Centre here and a member of the "Bricha" (Escape) group that planned the assassination, revealed on Friday.

Mr. Friedman told "Ithm" that a group of men belonging to "Bricha" — the organization engaged in smuggling Jews out of Europe and into British-controlled Palestine after World War II — had traced the former Mufti of Jerusalem (who died in Lebanon last week) to Salzburg in Austria. Their plan to assassinate him for his part in the destruction of European Jewry was discovered by the U.S. occupation forces in Austria. They tipped off the Mufti, who managed to escape. The Americans also warned the "Bricha" men not to try to catch up with him, Mr. Friedman said.

The Documentation Centre, Mr. Friedman said, had in its files papers attesting to Haj Amin's part in the murder of 5,000 Jewish children in Southern France in 1943. The Mufti had learned of an agreement between the Vichy Government and certain Western officials to smuggle the children into Spain, and from there to Palestine. He immediately appealed to Adolph Eichmann, threatening to stop collaborating with the Nazis if the children were saved. The threat seems to have worked, Mr. Friedman said, and the children died in a concentration camp.

Mr. Friedman also told of the Mufti's personal intervention with Eichmann to make certain that the Nazi's programme for the extermination of Hungarian Jewry was carried out. Almost all the Germans' trains were needed for the Nazi war effort, but following a meeting between Haj Amin and Eichmann in Budapest in 1944, enough trains were nevertheless allocated to transport Hungary's Jews to the Jewish camps.

Arab affairs reporter Victor Nakhman adds:

The East Jerusalem newspaper "Al-Kuds" paid tribute in its editorial on Friday to the role played by Haj Amin "in the service of his people." But the paper recalled his faults, "which brought so much suffering on the Palestinian people."

"Al-Kuds" said: "His insistence on replying to opinions other than his own with bullets and assassinations, shut the door to many possible solutions to the Palestine problem."

The paper added, however, that Haj Amin deserved to be buried in his homeland. The funeral will take place today in the "Martyrs of Palestine" cemetery near Beirut.

'More are enlisting' now in combat units

TEL AVIV. — A greater percentage of conscripted youth is now volunteering for combat units than did before the October war — Aluf-Mishne Baruch, head of planning in the Army's Manpower Division, said on Friday night.

Speaking in an interview with Israel Radio's Gideon Lev-Ari, Aluf-Mishne Baruch said that in last February's intake, there was a 23 per cent increase in the number of draftees going to combat units — including non-voluntary units — compared with the same intake last year.

He was perturbed, however, that the volunteering spirit did not appear to extend beyond the period of national service, at the conclusion of which most young men chose to leave the army. (Ithm)

Former J'lem man gets order nisi on right to stay

The High Court of Justice on Friday issued an order nisi calling on the Interior Minister to show cause within 60 days why a visitor from Jordan, who claims he lived in East Jerusalem until after the Six Day War, should not be allowed to remain in Israel.

The applicant, Dahoud Ahmad Audeh, 35, claimed that he lived in the Sheikh Jarrah quarter of East Jerusalem until November 1967, when he received permission to visit a sick brother in Jordan. When he tried to return a few weeks later, his entry was barred by Israeli officials.

Audeh finally obtained permission to enter Israel as a visitor in June, 1972. When he was threatened with expulsion in March, 1973, after his visitor's permit had expired, he applied to the High Court for an injunction against the Interior Minister. The Interior Ministry at the time said it would look into the matter.

Audeh denied allegations that he had joined Al Fatah while in Jordan, noting in his appeal that he was opposed to the terrorist organizations.

28 dead, 124 hurt in Bangkok riots

BANGKOK. — Heavily-armed police yesterday moved into Bangkok's turbulent Chinatown searching for snipers and weapons after three nights of rioting that officially left at least 27 dead and 124 injured.

Jeep-loads of police fanned out from a battered police station at the centre of the riot-stricken area as they braced themselves for a new round of violence last night. Meanwhile, the Thai Government appealed to the public to avoid the area if possible.

Premier Sanya Thammasak told reporters Friday that two Chinese motorcycle gangs — "The Eagles" and "The Dragons" — bore most of the responsibility. A ranking police officer said the accidental death of an elderly Chinese by police gunfire might also have been to blame.

The street fighting between heavily armed Chinese youths and Thai police and soldiers tapered off at dawn Saturday after reinforced police units chased young gunmen through the streets during the night and made more than 80 arrests. The clashes have been long-simmering resentment between the Chinese and the Thai police.

Snipers entered the fray for the first time on Friday, trading shots with police from the upper windows of darkened Chinatown. Authorities said police foiled an attempt to firebomb the Phlabplachai Police Station.

The violence began Thursday night when a taxi driver, taken to the Phlabplachai Station for a parking violation, claimed he had been beaten by the police. Chinese youths quickly went on a rampage and surrounded the station, and police gunfire killed seven members of the crowd.

In the next two days, bands of rioters — some wielding iron bars, homemade petrol bombs and stolen rifles — smashed cars, looted shops, set cars on fire and exchanged shots with police and the crack border police who had been called into the city.

Sanya, in his strongest action in the nine months since students overthrew the old military regime, declared a state of emergency and dispatched soldiers to guard Government buildings and other key posts around the capital.

The clashes are the worst to break out between Government forces and rising youths since the military regime was toppled last October. The police became a hated force during the October demonstrations, and Mr. Sanya has hesitated to use them — even in demonstrations that threatened to turn violent.

It was this hatred of the police, observers said, that turned the minor incident of the taxi-driver's arrest into the worst rioting Chinatown has seen since soon after the end of World War Two.

Chinatown is an upper-middle class neighbourhood inhabited by merchants and businessmen of Chinese origin. It has spawned a violent subculture of motorcycle gangs that often engage in street warfare among themselves. On a number of occasions police have intervened, adding to the resentment many of the youths have toward policemen.

Another factor that has escalated the current clashes is the general unrest that has swept the country since the former military government's downfall. (Reuters, AP)

Accord reached on laid-off Zim seamen

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The Seamen's Union has reached an agreement with the Government concerning the future of the some 200 ratings, most of them seafarers, crew members of the passenger ships Dan and Nili, who lost their jobs when the ships were laid up last January.

The Government had decided to abolish the passenger fleet, which comprised the two vessels and was jointly owned by the Government and the Zim company, because of the heavy losses they had incurred.

The secretary of the Catering Section of the Union, Shlomo Avitan, told The Jerusalem Post that under the agreement just over half the men will continue at sea, sailing on cargo ships. Most of them have already been given berths on Zim freighters and some are attending courses under the auspices of the Labour Ministry.

The remaining 100 men are leaving the sea, and will get enlarged severance pay from the Government, to help them reestablish themselves in other work. It was learned that the grants average several tens of thousands of pounds to each man.

Meanwhile the two ships have not yet been sold and are still laid up in Haifa port. It is hoped that some foreign buyer will purchase them during the winter, in time for next year's sailing season.

Samaria saboteurs sent to prison

NABLUS. — Several members of a large sabotage group in Samaria were sentenced to prison terms of from six to 12 months in the Military Court here last Thursday.

The group, which included 28 men and three women, was organized during the October war, but all its members were arrested before they could carry out any operations. The organizers of the group received weapons training in Jordan, Syria and Lebanon.

Some other members of the group received similar sentences a few months ago, and another 15 have still to be tried.

Meanwhile, the telephone link between this town and Jenin was cut by unknown saboteurs earlier last week.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS working in government offices during their summer vacation will be encouraged to submit suggestions for greater efficiency, with prizes to be awarded for suggestions adopted — a Civil Service Commission official announced last week.

Cosmonauts in orbit in space laboratory

MOSCOW (UPI). — Two Soviet cosmonauts familiarized themselves yesterday with a three-roomed home in space.

Ground controllers said they already have adapted perfectly to weightlessness, while their 20-ton Soyuz-15 orbiting laboratory is functioning perfectly.

The cosmonauts, Col. Pavel Popovich and Lt. Col. Yuri Artyukhin, both 44, entered the laboratory from their Soyuz-14 spacecraft early on Friday.

The Tass News Agency said the Soyuz-15 consists of a double cylinder and a cone providing three rooms. Although the craft is only a quarter the size of the American Skylab on which three astronauts spent a record 84 days in space, Tass said it provides enough space for a separate recreation room. Here Popovich and Artyukhin rest, take meals and do gymnastic exercises.

The laboratory, which has a total 99 cubic metres of living and working space, also has a proper floor and ceiling, Tass said. It said this has helped the cosmonauts adapt to weightlessness because "they know which is top and which is bottom."

Tass said the cosmonauts are testing Soyuz-15 engineering systems and its energy supply, which comes from solar panels that lock on the sun no matter what the position of the spacecraft.

Ground controller Yevgeny Khurnov, who docked with the Soyuz-4 and Soyuz-5 manned spacecrafts, said contact between the Soyuz-14 and Soyuz-15 was of pinpoint accuracy. "High accuracy was achieved with a minimum expenditure of fuel," he said.

Khurnov and other controllers maintain contact with Popovich and Artyukhin through a network of transmitters based both on land and at sea. Messages are relayed through a Molnya communications satellite.

Tass and other Soviet information organs have not given indication of how long the cosmonauts will remain in space. Three cosmonauts remained aloft for 24 days in 1971 but died on re-entering the earth's atmosphere because of a faulty hatch on their Soyuz-11.

Khurnov said the Soyuz-14 experiment is proof the Soviets are ready for their space linkup next year with an American Apollo. The cosmonauts achieved their docking in roughly 26 hours — well within the 30-hour time frame set for the Soviet-U.S. linkup.

Irish back new Ulster programme

LONDON (AP). — Northern Ireland administrator Merlyn Rees reassured Irish Foreign Minister Garret FitzGerald on Friday about London's latest peace plan for Ulster.

Political sources said the Irish Government was angry that Britain announced the proposals Thursday, without first consulting Dublin. Dublin has long claimed sovereignty over the north, partitioned more than 50 years ago.

However, Irish Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave announced support of the British programme after FitzGerald's talks in London.

The programme dumped the problem of Northern Ireland into the lap of Ulster residents, by proposing the election of a constitutional convention which must come up with a governing formula within six months.

The formula would have to include power sharing between Protestants and Catholics, have the approval of the British Parliament and must recognize Protestant-dominated Ulster's relationship with the neighbouring republic, which is mainly Catholic.

The British hoped the 78-member convention, to be elected at a date yet to be found, would find a political solution that will gain widespread acceptance in Ulster.

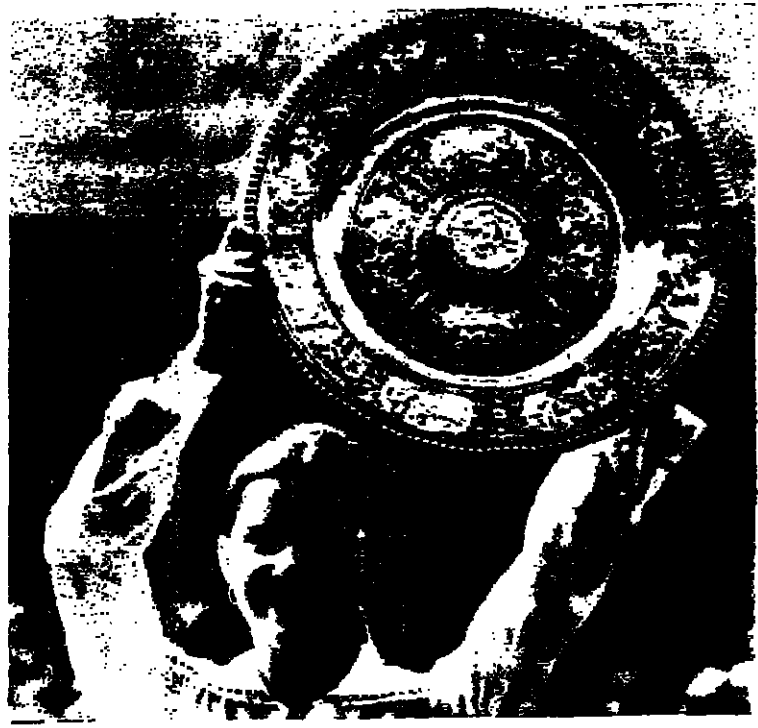

However, some experienced observers of the five-year-old sectarian conflict fear the convention will be dominated by hardline Protestants, who will settle for nothing less than a return to Protestant rule.

These militants toppled Ulster's first real power-sharing coalition in a political strike last May. Many of their leaders have stressed they will not share power with Catholics, whose ultimate goal is a united Ireland governed from Dublin.

In Belfast yesterday, the IRA paralysed commerce by sprinkling the city with fake bombs and warnings in an elaborate hoax, the army said. The authorities reacted to more than 40 bomb threat calls during the afternoon, but only one of the devices found contained explosives.

The one real bomb, secreted in a hijacked car, stalled traffic on the outskirts of the city until it was destroyed in a controlled explosion.

In one of the incidents, a gang of armed men hijacked a car, loaded a box fitted with wire into the back seat and forced the driver to park it outside a police station in North Queen Street. The driver raised the alarm as soon as he stopped and the police station was cleared. Bomb experts later destroyed the car in a controlled explosion, but found that the box supposedly containing the bomb was empty.

Evert and fiancé Connors capture Wimbledon crowns

WIMBLEDON. — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, brilliant young tennis players from the U.S. who are to be married in November, reigned as the king and queen of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships yesterday after winning the men's and women's singles titles.

Connors of Belleville, Illinois, thrashed his boyhood hero, Australian Ken Rosewall, in a cruelly one-sided final yesterday, 6-1, 6-1, 6-4. His victory came one day after his fiancée and her machine-like efficiency overcame Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union, 6-0, 6-4.

Connors and Miss Evert took the traditional first dance at the Wimbledon Ball last night which is reserved for the men's and women's singles champions. Asked earlier if they were looking forward to the dance, Connors had replied, "Yes and No. Yes, because we both won. No, because I don't dance so well."

It was the second time this year that the two have achieved a "double" in a major tournament, as they both won in the South African Championships in Johannesburg earlier in the season.

The crowd, which had come to the famous centre court yesterday to cheer the 39-year-old Rosewall to his first Wimbledon triumph, saw instead a devastating victory by Connors, who at 21 is the youngest men's champion here since Lew Hoad of Australia in 1956.

The match lasted just 90 minutes and amounted to the most lopsided men's final since John Newcombe of Australia dropped only five games against West German Wilhelm Bungert in 1967. Rosewall must continue to live with the tag of being the best player never to win Wimbledon. This was his fourth final and the previous three also slipped away from him, against Jaroslav Drobny in 1954, against Hoad in 1956 and against Newcombe four years ago.

In each of those finals Rosewall managed to take a set off his opponent, but yesterday he was not able to counter the power and speed of an inspired Connors.

The American, who was born two months after Rosewall made his Wimbledon debut in 1952, played supremely well, hitting winners from seemingly hopeless positions and cutting off shots at the net which would have passed most men by several metres.

With Connors playing so brilliantly, Rosewall was forced to go for improbable winners in difficult conditions, with the wind gusting and then dropping. He was not able to make the immaculate placements that are normally the feature of his game.

Connors' victory earned him first prize of £10,000, and he handed the check to Miss Evert. Connors tried to separate their tennis careers from their forthcoming marriage. "Even if we both lost here we would have got married," he said. Rosewall gained £6,000 by way of consolation.

Miss Evert's victory on Friday equaled another famous American, Maureen Connolly, who in 1954, also aged 19, captured the Italian, French, and Wimbledon titles in the same year.

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, who in her Wimbledon debut in 1972 reached the semi-finals and was runner up to Billie Jean King last year, brushed aside eighth-seeded Mrs. Morozova in under an hour in the most one-sided final since 1958 when Shirley Fry of the U.S. beat Britain's Angela Buxton 6-3 6-1.

She raced through the first set in 25 minutes — the first game with seven daces took up nearly half this time and although the Russian improved in the second set, Miss Evert was not to be deflected from the ruthless pursuit of her first major grass court title.

The victory earned her £7,000 while Mrs. Morozova will give her winnings, £4,000, to the Russian Lawn Tennis Association.

After the long opening game Miss Evert went from strength to strength and Mrs. Morozova dropped her service three times even though she led 40-0 in the fourth game.

In defence of the Russian it was difficult to see any way she could lose. Miss Evert's unfailing precision although she did help the American with many unforced errors.

The victory was Miss Evert's third over Mrs. Morozova in the last five weeks. She won 6-1 6-0 in the Italian semi-finals, 6-1 6-2 in the French final and 6-1 6-3 6-3 in a grass court tournament immediately before Wimbledon.

Miss Evert is the youngest Wimbledon champion since the late Miss Connolly won the first of three successive championships in 1932 at 17 years 9 months. American Karen Susman won the title in 1962 when she was just 10 days older than Miss Evert is now.

Rosewall reached the final on Friday with a stirring five-set triumph over American Stan Smith. Rosewall knocked victory from him in a contest of the most spectacular style and emerged the winner by 6-3 4-6 9-8 6-1 6-3.

Rosewall's victory, before a capacity crowd of 15,000 on centre court including Britain's Princess Margaret and Princess Alexandra, came after he had been left reeling and groggy by the thunderous attack of the powerful and extremely fit 27-year-old Smith for most of three sets.

Connors on Friday defeated his unseeded compatriot Dick Stockton in the semi-finals, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

As always where Connors is concerned, the semi-final was a physical affair. Stockton, too, had plenty of energy to expend and it seemed that the primary objective of the two was to bury the ball beneath number one court. Connors' hitting was particularly severe, especially his backhand, which is two-fisted and propels the ball with alarming force. When he warmed up in the second set, he frequently had Stockton groping at this air as the ball thudded into the canvas backdrops. (Reuters, UPI)

World Cup final today Brazil bows to Poland in third-place match

Dethroned champions Brazil yesterday slipped another rung in the world soccer hierarchy when they bowed to Poland by the lone goal in the 75th minute of the match for third place in an unspectacular affair to this afternoon's World Cup climax between Holland and West Germany.

Yesterday's encounter disappointed the crowded Olympic Stadium in Munich, but failed to dampen the mounting excitement of scores of thousands of fans gathered there for today's culminating classic.

Holland's Flying Dutchmen take the field as narrow favourites over the home team. The West Germans, three times finalists and winners of the World Cup in 1954, started the current series as the unwelcome favourites but soon yielded pride of place to Holland in the hearts of spectators and the odds of bookmakers.

The West Germans have had a big say in the tournament ever since their shock triumph over Hungary in 1954. All this time Holland was on the outer fringes of the World Cup and fared poorly in their only two breakthroughs into the finals in 1954 and 1958. And they only made this year's finals by the whisker of goal average after finishing even with Belgium.

But all this was forgotten as the Lowlanders soared to great popularity on the wings of their polished assault tactics, playing total soccer with the entire team at times surging to the offensive. In contrast West Germany aroused the ire of its own fans by lack-lustre performances that included a humiliating 0-1 defeat at the hands of the untried East Germans. Their one spectacular set-to was the thriller packed defeat of Sweden, 4-2, which won them the right to meet Poland as one of the four survivors of the championship. They edged the Poles by 1-0.

In Munich yesterday, Gregor Lato confirmed his position as the world's deadliest finisher when he shot the 75th minute goal which gave Poland a 1-0 victory over Brazil here and third place in the 1974 World Cup.

Lato, the 24-year-old forward with thunder in his feet, left the Brazilian defenders gasping behind him as he cut from the right wing and fired a low shot into the corner of the net in the 75th minute.

This brought his tally in the finals to seven goals in seven matches, and he now seems certain to finish as the top scorer of the tournament. He is followed by team-mate Andrzej Sarmach with five, Holland's top scorers, Johnny Rep and Johan Neeskens have four goals each to their credit.

Brazil, again a pale shadow of the team which once ruled the soccer world, could not complain at their defeat, although at least their behaviour improved compared with

Brazil's coach ready to face the music

MUNICH (UPI). — Brazilian coach Mario Zagallo said yesterday he was not afraid to go back to his country even though his team not only lost the world title but also failed to make third place yesterday.

"There are other Brazilian coaches who have failed to win the World Cup in previous years, and they are all alive," Zagallo said.

The brutality they displayed in the match against Holland last Wednesday.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and European leaders were among the crowd as police mounted one of the biggest security operations in post-war Germany.

Kissinger did not think much of the match either. "The only comment I have to make is that we are looking forward to Sunday's game between West Germany and Holland," he said. (Reuters, UPI)

Man who turned in Eichmann dies

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters). — German-born Lothar Hermann, who reportedly revealed the whereabouts of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann to Israeli hunters, died here early last week, the Argentine news agency Telam reported yesterday. He was 73. Telam said Hermann was blind and died at his home here from a heart attack on July 1.

In 1967, Hermann informed the Frankfurt prosecutor general that he knew the whereabouts of Eichmann, whose son had fallen in love with his daughter. The information was passed on to the Israeli authorities. Three years later Eichmann was abducted by Israeli agents in Argentina and placed on trial in Jerusalem in 1961. He was hanged a year later.

Tuvia Friedman, founder and Director of the Documentation Centre in Haifa, said last night that Lothar Hermann was interested by the Nazis in Dachau and emigrated to Argentina in 1939 after his release. His wife was Christian, and his daughter Sylvia was wooed in Argentina by Nicholas Eichmann, son of the Nazi. When Hermann discovered the identity of the author's father, he wrote to Mr. Friedman, who had offered a $10,000 reward for information on Eichmann. Eichmann was captured as a result of Hermann's information, but Hermann received the reward only two years ago after appealing to former Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Producer agrees to cut film that angered Amin

PARIS (UPI). — The producer of a French film about Uganda President Idi Amin has agreed to cut portions of the film after the general ordered to the French Government, he said yesterday.

Jean-François Chauvel, the producer, said the French Ambassador in Uganda had also prepared 132 French citizens living in Uganda for evacuation in case the general chose to intern them in retaliation.

The general became upset after commentators said that he was "the funniest actor since Woody Allen" and that the film was "a masterpiece of unconscious comedy."

Chauvel flew to Kampala and talked five hours with Uganda government ministers and four hours with the general. "I agreed to cut certain scenes of the film which was made last February," Chauvel said. "The Uganda President expressed his bitterness because the clauses of the contract with him were not respected. At present, all has been put in order."

The scenes that landed on the cutting room floor include one showing a public execution while a commentator told of thousands of persons who have disappeared since General Amin took power in a 1971 military coup.

Also cut was a commentary saying Foreign Minister Michael Odeh, criticised by the general in the film, had been found dead in a river shortly thereafter. Chauvel also removed a scene in which Amin is asked about a telegram he sent to President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania saying, "I love you so much that if you were a woman I would marry you despite your gray hair."

2 E. German guards escape to West

HANOVER, Germany (AP). — East German guards fled across mined, barbed-wire border they supposed to patrol into West Germany's Lower Saxony State today, Western border police said. They said a 19-year-old draftee missioned officer and a 20-year private made their escape into Saxony's Harz Mountains.

State asks suspended sentence for Beate

LOGNE (Reuter). — The prosecution has requested a suspended sentence for Beate Klarsfeld, on charges of attempting to kidnap a former Gestapo chief of Paris, in Lischka.

Prosecutor Rudolf Gehring said Friday that the court should take into consideration the seven weeks Mrs. Klarsfeld had spent in a trial detention.

Mrs. Klarsfeld is charged with having tried to kidnap Lischka three years ago. Her Israeli lawyer, Arie Arinsky, has told the court that she aimed to take Lischka to France to serve a 1950 sentence of hard labour for life, imposed in his absence for war crimes.

On Friday, Marinsky, completing a summary-up, asked the court to grant Mrs. Klarsfeld, or at most, only a "symbolic" sentence.

The verdict is expected tomorrow Tuesday.

The prosecutor said Friday he was opposing two additional charges against the 35-year-old Nazi-hunter, who holds both French and German passports. They related to demonstrations in West Germany.

Defence counsel Marinsky told the court: "You, as judges of post-war Germany, have a unique opportunity here to proclaim a juridical and moral protest against the perpetuation of this deadly legacy which has turned your country into a law-protected haven for mass-killers."

He said the cardinal issue of the trial was that Lischka and other Nazi war criminals roamed the streets of post-war Germany free and unmolested, protected by West German law.

Israel, he said, was full of people who would be only too glad to shoot Lischka and other Nazi criminals in Germany and "have them vanish from the face of the earth without a trace." But this would not solve the moral problem, he said.

Before Friday's hearings got underway, members of the public were expelled from the trial in retaliation for disturbances which brought the proceedings to an abrupt halt Wednesday.

In a statement to the court, the judge said he was taking this action because it was the only way of securing an orderly trial.

Chile's diplomatic pouches bring cocaine into U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP). — A drug mugging ring that allegedly brought $2.7m. worth of cocaine into the U.S. by using Chilean diplomatic pouches and military flights has been broken up by the arrest of 22 persons last week, according to the Justice Department.

Arrests were made here and in New York City, Madison, Wisconsin, and Santiago, Chile.

A five-count federal indictment in the Southern District of New York said that, on at least three occasions, one of the suspects "stowed four kilos of cocaine in diplomatic pouches, which were then transported to Washington D.C. and passed through U.S. customs."

Split seen at sea conference if PLO participation raised

CARACAS (Reuter). — The U.N. Law of the Sea Conference meeting here faces a possible major split over an Arab League demand for participation by the Palestinian Liberation Organisation and other "recognized liberation movements."

Mamdouh Azzam, delegate of the Arab League, which has official observer status at the 150-nation conference, requested the participation of the PLO "in its capacity as the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people." He also called for the participation of all other liberation movements recognized by regional organizations.

Addressing a plenary session of the conference, Mr. Azzam declared it was only just and equitable to allow liberation movements "to participate in the formulation of the new regime of the sea, to which they will become parties once their national aspirations are fulfilled." He did not say what status he was requesting for the liberation movements.

According to Arab and African diplomats, however, the chairman of the African group, Senegal Ambassador Amadou Cisse, is likely to present a formal motion within the next few days requesting immediate observer status for the movements.

Responding to this, Israeli chief delegate, Amiel Najar, told reporters later that the move to seat the liberation movements was illegal and threatened to plunge the conference into useless political wrangles.

"It is absolutely illegal to raise this issue at this conference," Mr. Najar declared. He added that the U.N. General Assembly had clearly determined the composition of the conference by a resolution of November 16, 1973, "and now it is not possible for this conference to change its composition." Mr. Najar forewarned "very difficult debates" if the proposal to seat the liberation movements was officially presented, noting that he had not come to Caracas "to find a substitute for the classical debates at the United Nations."

Arab and African diplomats swiftly challenged the Israeli claim that it would be illegal to bring in the liberation movements.

"This is a conference of plenipotentiaries," declared Ambassador Noureddine Djoudi, Assistant Secretary-General of the Organisation of African Unity (O.A.U.). — "It is absolutely sovereign and can take whatever decision it wants to."

Mr. Azzam, the Arab League observer, recalled as a precedent that the P.L.O. and other liberation movements had been invited to a previous U.N. conference on human rights in Geneva.

Meanwhile, hundreds of delegates sought the seaside on Friday, relaxing after four days of debate marked by frequent heated verbal exchanges between rival power blocs. The bitter political clashes of the week came with heated attacks on the two super-powers — the Soviet Union and the United States — by China and its ally, Albania. The Soviet delegate, Valentin Romanov, walked out at one point during the Albanian delegate's speech, but returned to declare that the attacks on his country were "phenomena bordering on the pathological."

China admits Chou En-lai in hospital

PEKING (Reuter). — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, who has been ill for nearly two months, was in hospital when he met American Senator Henry Jackson briefly on Friday, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported early yesterday.

It is the first public disclosure that the 76-year-old Chinese leader's illness is serious enough to require hospital treatment.

Senator Jackson, a leading Democratic hopeful for the 1976 presidential election, is visiting here for foreign policy talks. He saw Mr. Chou for half-an-hour.

Mr. Chou's last appearance in public was on May 31. He fell ill in early May, and Chinese officials explained it was due to his age.

He has since curtailed his duties which have been taken over by either the two vice-premiers, Li Hsien-nien and Teng Hsiao-ping.

Jackson commented that the Chinese Premier was "extremely alert and in good humour," adding he was "sharp as a tack."

The Democratic Party Senator did not disclose the nature of Mr. Chou's illness or where the meeting took place.

The Chinese news agency said Chou asked Senator Jackson to convey his regards to President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger on his return home.

It did not give other details.

American slain by bike-riding robbers in Saigon

SAIGON (AP). — Two motorbike-riding Vietnamese robbers snatched the briefcase of an American official of the U.N. Development Programme and shot him to death when he ran after them, authorities said yesterday.

Police and officials of the programme identified the victim as William V. Sausotte, 60, of Palo Alto, California, who had been in Vietnam only three weeks.

Pierre Sales, chief representative of the U.N. Development Fund which has 70 officials in Vietnam, said the slaying of Sausotte was "a most untimely death."

Witnesses said Sausotte was walking by the central post office about noon when two Vietnamese men riding on a motorbike snatched his briefcase while scores of people looked on. He ran after the motorbike in an attempt to get the briefcase back, and one of the men pulled out a pistol and shot him, witnesses said. He was dead on arrival at a city hospital.

The robbers escaped and police launched an investigation.

U.S. report says Concorde makes too much noise

WASHINGTON (AP). — The Concorde SST and its Russian counterpart, the TU 144, will produce noise that carries farther and has an impact on more people than even the loudest conventional jets now in use, a U.S. Transportation Department report concludes.

The report says the plane noise will probably not sound much louder than the loudest conventional jets but that frequency levels produced by the SST engines will probably cover a greater distance.

"Substantial adverse public reaction is expected," the report warns, if the Federal Government allows either plane to begin scheduled flights at any U.S. airport, except possibly the new Dallas-Fort Worth regional airport. That airport is surrounded by sparsely populated land.

The Concorde already has made several demonstration flights into U.S. airports and its builders currently have pending with the Federal Aviation Administration a request for approval of 36 promotional flights from London to U.S. cities. The plane could begin regularly scheduled service as early as the end of 1975.

The Department's report, dated December 11, 1973, was turned over to lawyers for the Environmental Defence Fund as the result of a court suit. EDF made the document available to the public.

The report says the Concorde, using the recommended landing strip at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York City, would expose 55,000 persons to noise levels of 100 effective perceived noise decibels — or about the same sensation of noise a person would get while standing 50 feet from a highway as a heavy-duty diesel truck roared past.

In contrast, the report said, a Boeing 707 using the same landing strip would expose about 35,000 persons to the same noise and a 707 with sound-absorbing material in its engines would expose about 7,000 persons to the same noise.

WARREN — Earl Warren, 83, the former Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, remained in fair condition yesterday as he spent his fifth day in Georgetown University Hospital in Washington with heart trouble.

— Astronomers who claimed a year ago to have discovered a mysterious "black hole" in space say they may have found a second one, further evidence that such things exist.

Theoretically, a black hole is the final stage of a dying star several times bigger than the sun. As the star collapses into itself, becoming smaller and smaller, its mass concentrates and its gravity becomes so strong that surrounding matter is pulled into it.

Since the gravity is so strong that not even light can escape, the star appears to be a black area in a field of stars — hence the name "black hole."

Using data from an X-ray astronomy satellite called Uhuru, scientists of the Centre for Astrophysics here say they have detected radiation from a star they call Circinus X-1 with characteristics similar to the suspected black hole they discovered last year.

Impeachment threat weakened Nixon's hand in Moscow talks

By JOSEPH KRAFT

MOSCOW. — The Moscow summit meetings last week provided a foretaste of the rough going the U.S. is apt to encounter in the international arena as long as President Nixon clings to office. The talks here showed plainly that Mr. Nixon has lost his clout in the most important area of foreign affairs.

Moreover, the President's weakness is now beginning to rub off on his Secretary of State. Dr. Kissinger can no longer wield the club of a strong presidency to line up the American bureaucracy in the style required by his special kind of diplomacy.

Unmistakable evidence of the President's weakness abroad arose from his efforts to make the summit talk a personal victory. He repeatedly and publicly declared that the talks and their success depended upon "personal diplomacy" between himself and Secretary General Leonid Brezhnev.

But the Russians did not rise to that bait. On one occasion, which referred to the future, "Pravda" struck the term "personal" from the text of a presidential toast.

At the final banquet, Mr. Brezhnev made rejoinder to the President's stress on personal diplomacy by pointedly alluding to the American People and the American Congress. The Russians have come to understand that their future with the U.S. requires a thick diet of relations with all elements in American life. It says something of Moscow's changing view that a documentary film of Sen. Edward Kennedy's recent visit to Russia opened here last week.

Neither were the Russians prepared to oblige the President on the main matter of substance in the summit talks here. The big item on the agenda turned around proposals for a limitation on multi-headed missiles, or MIRVs.

The Russians clearly sensed that they had Mr. Nixon on the defensive. Secretary General Brezhnev presented proposals which would have allowed the Russians to catch up with the U.S. and perhaps achieve a decisive edge in 1980. Not only did the Russians feel able to hang tough, but it seems clear that the President could not have bought a slightly softer Russian position.

Mr. Nixon depends on conservative votes in the Senate to overcome impeachment. The last thing he can afford is a nuclear agreement that would alienate such hawks as Barry Goldwater.

Congressional opposition was the more certain because the Administration position on MIRV limitation has not been unanimous. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger actually wanted more restrictive limits on Soviet deployment than those set forth in the U.S. proposal which the Russians rejected. Had a deal been struck there would have been some murderous infighting within the Administration.

For relations among the chief figures inside Mr. Nixon's government have been recently altered. Dr. Kissinger is used — by invoking the President's authority and by playing a close, inside game — to force his own positions on the rest of Washington.

But the presidency which he once brandished as a club has turned into a banana. Independent-minded men, such as Mr. Schlesinger, can and do take positions which differ from those of the Secretary of State. Dr. Kissinger now has to make treaties with the Washington opposition instead of overcoming it by main force.

It says a good deal that during the Moscow visit various Russians expressed a keen interest in a visit from the Defence Secretary. It also says something that Dr. Kissinger hung back in the negotiations, and once, not entirely in jest, said: "Nobody tells me anything. I just follow ten paces behind."

What was achieved at the Moscow Summit, in these conditions, is not to be disparaged. The condition called détente was maintained. Some accords which provide for further cooperation were signed. A truly bad deal was avoided.

No doubt it is unfortunate that more was not achieved. But no one should be in any doubt as to why the accomplishment was so meagre.

The central fact is that the U.S. has a President crushed by the problems which have brought an impeachment process down upon his head. Even if he were a man of pure motive and unblemished conscience, he could not possibly separate out his own interest from the national interest. So long as he remains in office, the U.S. will limp along in its most important international business.

Watergate tape case goes to Supreme Court tomorrow

WASHINGTON (AP). — President Nixon's lawyer and special prosecutor Leon Jaworski will debate issues connected with the Watergate trial before the U.S. Supreme Court for the first time tomorrow.

Against a background of precedents dating over the past 150 years, they will argue the President's claim that he is entitled to withhold tapes and papers wanted for the Watergate cover-up trial, due to start September 9.

The justices will reach their decision in closed conferences following the hearing. A decision is expected within a couple of weeks since the court agreed to consider the case on a expedited basis.

In briefs filed with the Supreme Court, attorneys for both sides cited more than 200 previous court decisions, ranging in time from the early 19th century to last month.

DEFINITIVE ORDER

Nixon said last year he would comply with a "definitive order" of the Supreme Court to produce the tapes. Presidential spokesman Gerald P. Warren has declined to clarify this statement while the case is pending in the high court.

U.S. District Judge John Sirica had ordered Nixon on May 20 to surrender tape recordings and documents relating to 84 presidential conversations. The judge intended to study the material to determine whether it should be handed over to Jaworski for use as evidence.

White House attorneys, who had moved unsuccessfully to quash the subpoena for the potential evidence, appealed to the Court of Appeals in Washington on May 24, but an hour later, Jaworski asked the Supreme Court to take the case directly.

On Friday, Federal Judge Gerhard A. Gesell rejected defence motions for dismissal of conspiracy and perjury charges against former presidential adviser John Ehrlichman, as the prosecution completed its case against him. Ehrlichman is the highest-ranking White House official yet to be tried in a Watergate-related case. He and three others are on trial in connection with a 1971 burglary at the offices of a psychiatrist who treated "Pentagon Papers" defendant Daniel Ellsberg.

The judge also refused, for the moment, to block a defence effort to have Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called to testify.

Lawyers for Dr. Kissinger earlier asked the court to quash a subpoena for Dr. Kissinger's appearance, on grounds that he has already said he had no information about the break-in.

K's MISSION

They said a court appearance now would require Dr. Kissinger to "abruptly terminate his official mission abroad, including critical meetings with U.S. allies and various NATO officials in Europe."

Judge Gesell instructed the Secretary of State's counsel that Dr. Kissinger should be prepared to testify, if necessary, next week, when he returns from Europe.

Judge Gesell also turned down, for the second time, a set of written questions defence lawyers want to submit to President Nixon for sworn answers. He said they did not meet the Court's guidelines. However, he said he might still sign an order sending the interrogators to the White House, if the defence can come up with a list of questions which meet his standards.

Inflationary pressure reaching the exploding point
No time left for niceties

By Moshe Ater
Jerusalem Post Economic Editor

The government's emergency economic programme was approved by the Knesset by a larger majority than expected. Nevertheless, its implementation is still facing difficulties owing to widespread opposition to the suggested incomes policy.

The Histadrut is now in a very strong position both for material and for formal reasons. In an economy short of labour, in which defence projects (from arm industries to construction of shelters and border fences) compete with the private sector for the available workers, and employers are ready to go to great lengths in order to attract or keep workers and induce them to produce, a steady upward creep of wages can hardly be avoided.

Friday, with many traders staying away after the July 4 holiday, big board volume totalled only 1.3 million shares, a 2 1/2 year low. The American Stock Exchange had a turnover of only 1.1 million shares — the lightest since October, 1968. Total big volume for the four trading days was 4.45 million shares, compared with 5.18 million for the days of trading the previous government — backed by a National Coalition — was stronger. Though the "package deal" was preceded by laborious negotiations, the crucial factor which prompted the public and the unions to swallow the bitter pill of a lid on incomes was the threat of a tough fiscal policy that would tax away any gain achieved on the wage front.

Today the government is not supported on such a wide front, and while the economic malaise is much more earnest, it is more difficult for the government to adopt adequate measures to check the dangerous trend. Mr. Rabinowitz indeed admitted that our economic situation has never been so grim, but he too failed to convey to the public the full scale of the tasks we are now facing.

The emergency programme was decided upon hastily not only because of the buying spree caused by leakages about forthcoming price hikes, but also because speedy action was required in order to prevent inflation from gathering even greater force under the double pressure of soaring wages and a rising government deficit.

The cost-of-living increment due this month, plus the other wage hikes stipulated by recent collective agreements, are about to add 10 percent to people's disposable purchasing power. The government's aggressive spending seems to be topping the budget estimates by a similar percentage, while revenue is lagging behind the forecasts. The resulting deficitary time bomb seems to be not IL2 billion — the sum mentioned by official spokesmen for an eventual supplementary budget — but at least twice that much. If urgent action is not taken to defuse this inflationary pressure, it must explode fairly shortly, with increased substantially. But it is doubtful whether much can be achieved in this respect over a short term even by application of higher interest and heavier fines for tax arrears.

Similarly, broadening of the tax base is proceeding very slowly owing to the widespread opposition (partly backed by the trade unions) against taxing perks and social benefits.

Imposition of a general property tax — long since advocated by economists — is also impractical for the time being for lack of a legal and administrative basis. Thus the 5 percent emergency levy, included in the present emergency programme, had to be confined to assets covered by the existing property tax, inadequate though it may be, and even this narrow base has been reduced by exclusion of owner-occupied flats, and of business inventories and equipment.

The Value Added Tax — which could have been of good use at this moment — is still in an early preparatory stage. And suggestions concerning an excess profits tax have probably been rejected for fear of their counter-productive effects at a time when tax evasion is rampant, and efficiency incentives are palpably inadequate. There remained little alternative but to resort to indirect taxation by raising the import surcharge (and the purchase tax-base) and to extend the compulsory war loan.

The plain truth is that we are now reaping the fruits of our own failure to carry out comprehensive tax reforms, and to grapple with the inflationary pressure at an earlier stage. Now that time is running short, crude methods may have to be applied, which leaves little scope for social niceties.

he said, is, prima facie, the next friend who is entitled to sue on behalf of the minor, under rule 32 of the Civil Procedure Rules. In cases, therefore, where the parent has not shown any hostility, neglect or indifference towards his child, the court will not permit anybody else to interfere in his affairs and sue on behalf of the child.

The respondent, he continued, neither neglected nor was indifferent to his children, but regularly gave his wife half his earnings for her and the children's use. The kibbutz treasurer on the other hand, he held, was obviously not interested in the welfare of the children, and but for the fact that they happened to be living in the kibbutz would not have lifted a finger for them. His only concern was for the kibbutz, which sought to recompense itself for the cost of keeping the children, while avoiding suing their father directly on their own behalf. Furthermore, he continued, not only was the kibbutz treasurer not acting for the children's good, but he was actually causing them harm by creating an artificial dispute between them and their father. The treasurer had, therefore, abused the judicial process and his statement of claim had been properly struck out.

Having dismissed the appeal, Justice Sussman went on to hold that he agreed with the District Court judge that in the circumstances it would not be right to award costs against the two children. He therefore awarded costs of IL2,000 against the kibbutz secretary with the proviso that if he did not pay them then the respondent could apply to the District Court for an order requiring the advocate who had acted on behalf of the kibbutz to pay this sum personally.

Kibbutz did not act in children's interest

In the Supreme Court sitting as Court of Civil Appeals

Before the Deputy President (Justice Sussman), Justices Cohn and Kister.

Shai & Orli Leiserowitz, Appellants, v. Gavriel Leiserowitz, Respondent (C.A. 8/74).

KIBBUTZ MAY NOT SUE FOR MAINTENANCE ON BEHALF OF CHILDREN

LAW REPORT
The Jerusalem Post
Edited by Doris Lankin
SUNDAY, JULY 7, 1974

The Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a judgment of the Haifa District Court delivered on September 16, 1973 (in M.C. 22/71).

The respondent, Gavriel Leiserowitz, was a member of Kibbutz Ramat David. After a quarrel with the kibbutz, he left it and went to live with his parents in Haifa. His wife and two children, aged 16 and 12, remained in the kibbutz, however, his wife, who is a member of the kibbutz in her own right, continuing to perform the normal functions of a kibbutz member conscientiously and joyfully. Despite this, the kibbutz treated her like a "second-class citizen," denying her rights as pocket money, small items of food to take home, improved living conditions, clothes and the right to a trip abroad, which all the other members enjoy. They justified this on the grounds that the kibbutz was not obliged to support her two children, who had remained in the kibbutz with their mother instead of leaving with their father.

Leiserowitz continued to visit his family in the kibbutz at least three times a week and gave his wife half of the wages he earned as a labourer in Haifa, in order to enable her to buy the small necessities which the kibbutz denied her and her children and to pay for their daughter's music lessons.

Incensed at the fact that Leiserowitz had not taken the children with him, the kibbutz then decided that his wife and children should sue him for maintenance. When the wife refused to do so, the treasurer of the kibbutz took upon himself the role of "next friend" of the children and sued Leiserowitz in the Haifa District Court for maintenance on the children's behalf.

Rule 32 of the Civil Procedure Rules, 1963, provides that "next friends" may sue on behalf of legally incompetent persons (that is minors, the mentally ill, etc.). A representative of the Attorney-General's office appeared in court, by virtue of section 8 of the Welfare (Procedure in Matters of Minors, etc.) Law, 1955, and expressed the opinion that the kibbutz treasurer was not acting in the welfare of the children. The District Court eventually struck out the statement of claim.

The children's self-appointed "next friend" then appealed to the Supreme Court on their behalf.

Mr. Z. Rotzen appeared for the appellants and Mr. I. Winter for the respondent.

Justice Sussman, who delivered the first opinion of the Supreme Court, Justice Kister concurring, noted at the outset that in addition to the grounds for striking out a statement of claim given in rule 105 of the Civil Procedure Rules, such a statement may be struck out by the court if it constitutes an abuse of judicial proceedings (see C.A. 138/70, 1 P.D. 25/95 and others). The court may, therefore, he held, strike out a statement of claim brought by a "next friend" of minors, if it is satisfied that the claim was not brought for the minors' benefit (see Re Correllis, 50 L.T. 703).

Justice Sussman then went on to consider the role of the kibbutz treasurer in the case under consideration. A minor's parent-guardian,
